Welcoming the new Louis

The rain curtailed plans for yacht rides around the harbor for party guests, and the gentleman spinning flaming hula hoops outside the store had a small audience, but otherwise the opening of the store formerly known as LouisBoston (it's just Louis now, thank you) went without a hitch. "It's going great!" said owner Debi Greenberg as she dashed across the parking lot to her car to pick up the evening's entertainment — does this woman have to do everything herself? The city's two most fashionable octogenarians — Marilyn Riseman and Doris Yaffe — made the rounds, as did Red Sox owner John Henry and his wife, Linda Pizzuti. Also on the best-dressed guest list were Tonya and Ben Mezrich (who mentioned he's about a month away from finishing his latest book), designer Brian Reyes, and Fan Pier developer Joe Fallon. Others toasting the new Louis included Mario Russo, Esti and Drew Parsons, developer Ron Druker, jewelry designer Lisa Stein, architect Tim Button, Chris Myers, Lydia Shire, Dustin Pedroia's wife, Kelli, Mandarin Oriental GM Susanne Hatje, Reebok's Paul Foster and wife Cecily, Avanti Salon's Alex Iacobacci, and PR peeps Kerri Landry and Marlo Fogelman.
